“Concert Under the Oaks” with Music of John Denver, Sep. 24

Imagine a soft early fall evening as the sun begins to set. You are sitting comfortably amidst nature, surrounded by chaparral and oak trees. Suddenly you hear the voice of the late John Denver, as though he had never left us. He sings of the countryside, the mountains, nature at its most beautiful.

You are at the Santa Rosa Plateau Foundation’s first annual Concert Under the Oaks, listening to the tunes of John Denver as sung by sound-alike John Adams under the accompaniment of his friends. It is Saturday, September 24, 2005 and you are experiencing an event you’ll never forget.

Congratulations. You are one of a select 250 people who will have seats for this concert. You had called Joanne New, concert chairperson, at (951) 698-0365, bought tickets at $50 a piece and now you are so glad you did.

During intermission you wander around the patio and visitor center, buying beverages, John Adams’ CDs or a DVD of an earlier performance, and bidding on the amazing items in the silent auction.

And you know you’ve done well, not only for yourself, but for the third grade children who will continue to visit the Santa Rosa Plateau Ecological Reserve thanks to your good taste and generosity.

Since the event is completely underwritten by its sponsors, every cent of your ticket price will go to the non-profit Foundation.

The major corporate sponsors are Guidant, Temecula Valley Bank, Arrowhead Credit Union, Community National Bank, State Farm and Perris Valley Airport.

The band will be staying at Comfort Inn & Suites, who also gave us a discount. Other in-kind
